

ABSTRACT

A system for transmitting data content and performing operations on the data content within a distributed system. Client machines within the system transmit to a server a request for a particular operation. The server constructs a response message, transmits it to the client, and 5 also transmits it to other machines including a reference to the requested information.